

LAWANG OIL

The History of Lawang

Hundreds of years ago Lawang Oil was discovered on two small islands on the Indonesian Archipelago. Considering there are more than 17,000 islands that constitute Indonesia, this makes Lawang Oil very rare indeed!!

Over four hundred years ago, as tradition has it, a villager discovered that by rubbing a leaf from a particular plant on his swollen and painful joints, he received considerable relief. It wasn't long before they discovered the art of distilling the oil from the leaves and bark of this plant, which was to become known as the Lawang Tree. As the tree was unique to their two islands, it gave them a very valuable product with which to barter among other islands.

Over a period of time they discovered other uses for the oil.

By gently massaging oil into the forehead, the pain of headaches was greatly reduced and by applying a small amount to an aching tooth again relief was found.

In the case of colds and symptoms of flu, they rub oil on their chests and inhale steam after a few drops of oil have been added to boiling water. But the main use was and still is for the relief of pain caused by Arthritis and Muscular Ailments.

Through word of mouth Lawang Oil became available throughout Indonesia. To this day in Indonesia, Lawang Oil is still not distributed in a commercial fashion (e.g. shops and chemists) but is sold by hawkers as has been done for centuries.

Lawang Oil is now available from Ideal Health Services.

Lawang Oil is a natural product from a tree and almost impossible to replicate artificially. The source of this oil is a very jealously guarded secret by the villagers that produce it.

Lawang Oil as a natural and undiluted product lasts for a long time. A 50 ml. bottle used on a daily basis will last on average, six weeks.

Lawang Oil has been analyzed by one of Australia's leading laboratories to check for any impurities and has been found safe for use by both humans and animals.
